Gathering of Fragments

This year, as all years, passed like a snowball
on a hill . . .
sluggish at first,
then, doubling,
and redoubling
its velocity
until it reaches the bottom of the hill . . .
and stops.
It's over.
Before we can gather
our memories . . .
Before we can sign
enough yearbooks . . .
Against our yes
or no . . .
. . . it's over
Then comes the time
For the gathering of fragments, the picking up of pieces.

Our scattered memories
fall in random fields.
We remember events . . .
happy float parties,
rallying pep assemblies, boring organizational meetings (I do so move):
Memorable, sacred, moving events.
We remember people . . .
that teacher we had for study hall,
that kid in our gym class,
our best friends.
People . . . glowing, moving, alive.
Incidents and individuals have impact which make them memorable.
Recollection of events involves motion . . .
directed motion in sports and activities.

Human motion is a different species . . .
spreading from person to person in a chain reaction . . .
circulating warmth through human corridors . . .
the motion called . . . emotion.
The outward flowing movement of emotion,
the swift racing stream
of motion,
shapes our memories
as a river shapes its banks.
Motion has a goal . . .
a newspaper deadline,
the score of a game play,
the final exam.
Emotion needs no goal . . .
and knows none.
It spreads without prejudice to everyone, everywhere.

Motion and emotion . . .
two forces . . . clashing, careening on collision course with each other,
yet mutually strengthening, reinforcing one another.
Two entities,
guiding our lives . . .
apart from us,
yet a part of us.
Motion and emotion . . .
memory is a battleground between the two.

Listen.
The wind seeks the cracks in the windows
to play us a haunting tune.
Hear the howl?
It is the boast of a force that can humble oaks, dispel clouds,
scatter anything in its path.
Why, then is its tune
so sad?
Loneliness, perhaps.

One motion has a special place in our lives . . .
a motion
we are all vital parts of,
as spectators in the bleachers as much as players in the spotlight . . .
a motion generated by spirit, by emotion . . .
it is a team motion,
and the crowd,
the roaring mass at the sidelines is a part of the team, proudly proclaiming their patronage:

Another type of motion
goes on at Iroquois,
a much more subtle motion.
It is easily seen,
if hard to recognize;
students cramming for finals, researching
asking questions,
offering answers.
This is motion,
with a definite goal:
knowledge.
Some call it teaching,
but that sounds too one-sided.
It is learning . . .
about people, mostly . . .
ourselves included.

Yes, the snowball that is life at Iroquois has come to the bottom of the hill.
But we have been at the summit for a while, at least, and higher plateaus rise in that nebulous horizon, future.
We have been at the top of the heap . . . heroes, champions.

SENIORS

Class History

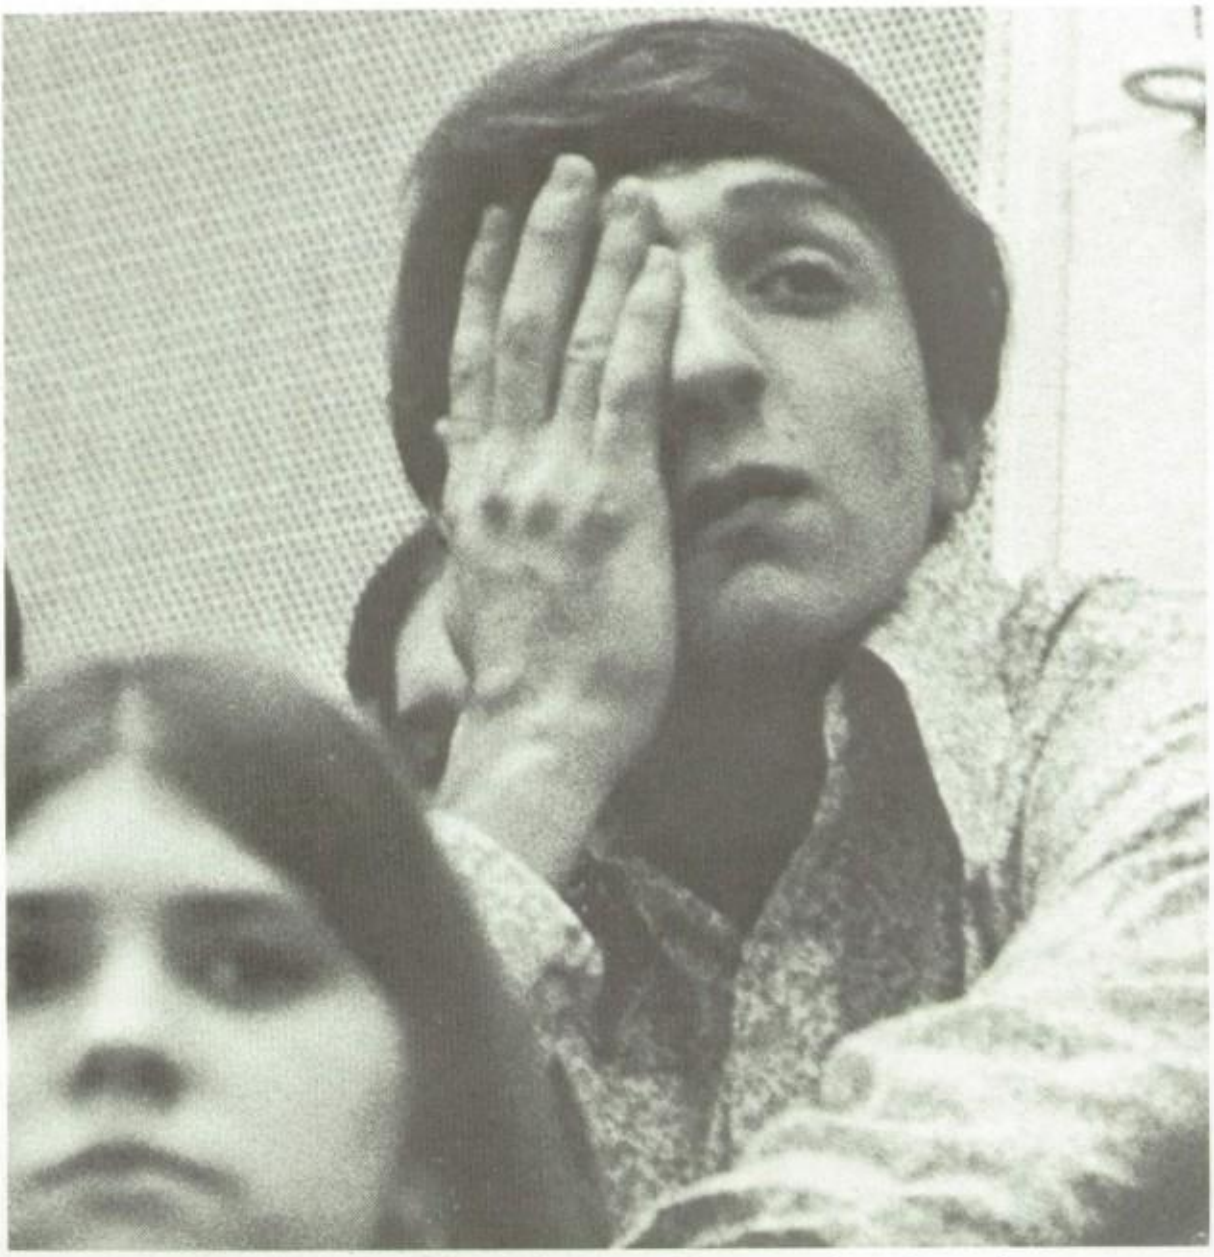
In the beginning we were freshmen . . . headed by our fearless leader Chris Reile, our first class president . . . big wheels of the junior high . . . capturing of 1st place in float competition . . .

Second stage of adolescence resulted in sophomores . . . Linda Weires, class president . . . big money-making car wash $13.00 . . . Snatched 1st place in float competition again with Humpty Dumpty . . . first encountering with seniors and Mr. Corser's gaa gaa . . . Fritz Kessler on varsity basketball squad . . . class pins—ICHS 72 . . .

Juniors, one step away from the throne . . . Jr.-Sr. prom . . . slave dance . . . Jim Gotro, master of ceremonies . . . stealing of 1st place with Raggedy Ann and Andy characters in float competition . . .

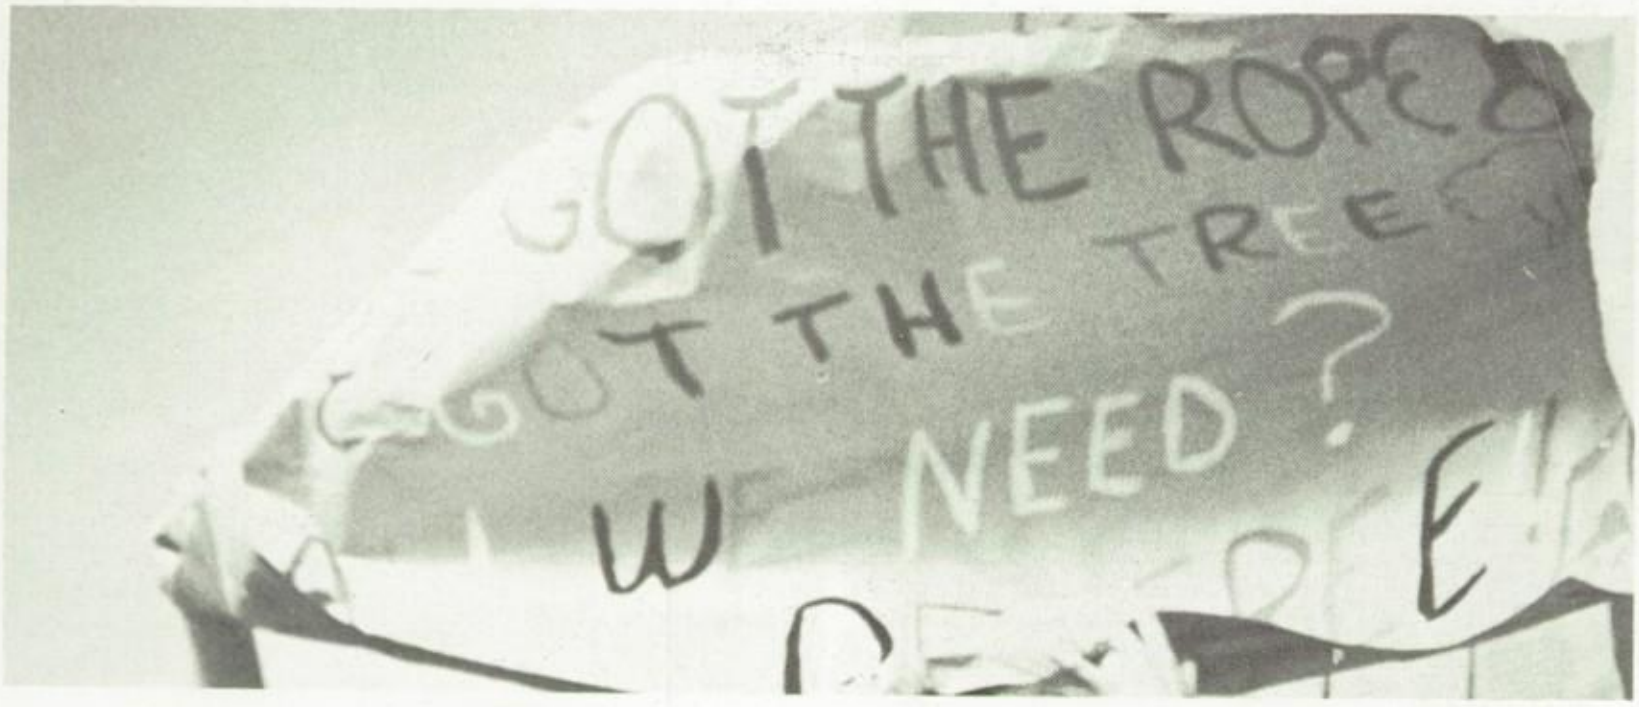
At last the almighty seniors . . . initiation of freshmen . . . Pat Clark elected class president . . . parties and Vietnam crawls . . . parking tickets . . . John Panzarella pulls Student Council together . . . Ann Carey and Chris Sanborn take leads in "110° in the Shade" . . . Homecoming . . . Heike Grethe, queen . . . cries of we're no. 1 as seniors take 1st place for the 4th consecutive year in float competition . . . Yesterday is forever . . . tomorrow is a long time . . . Prom '72 . . . the days of wine and roses . . .

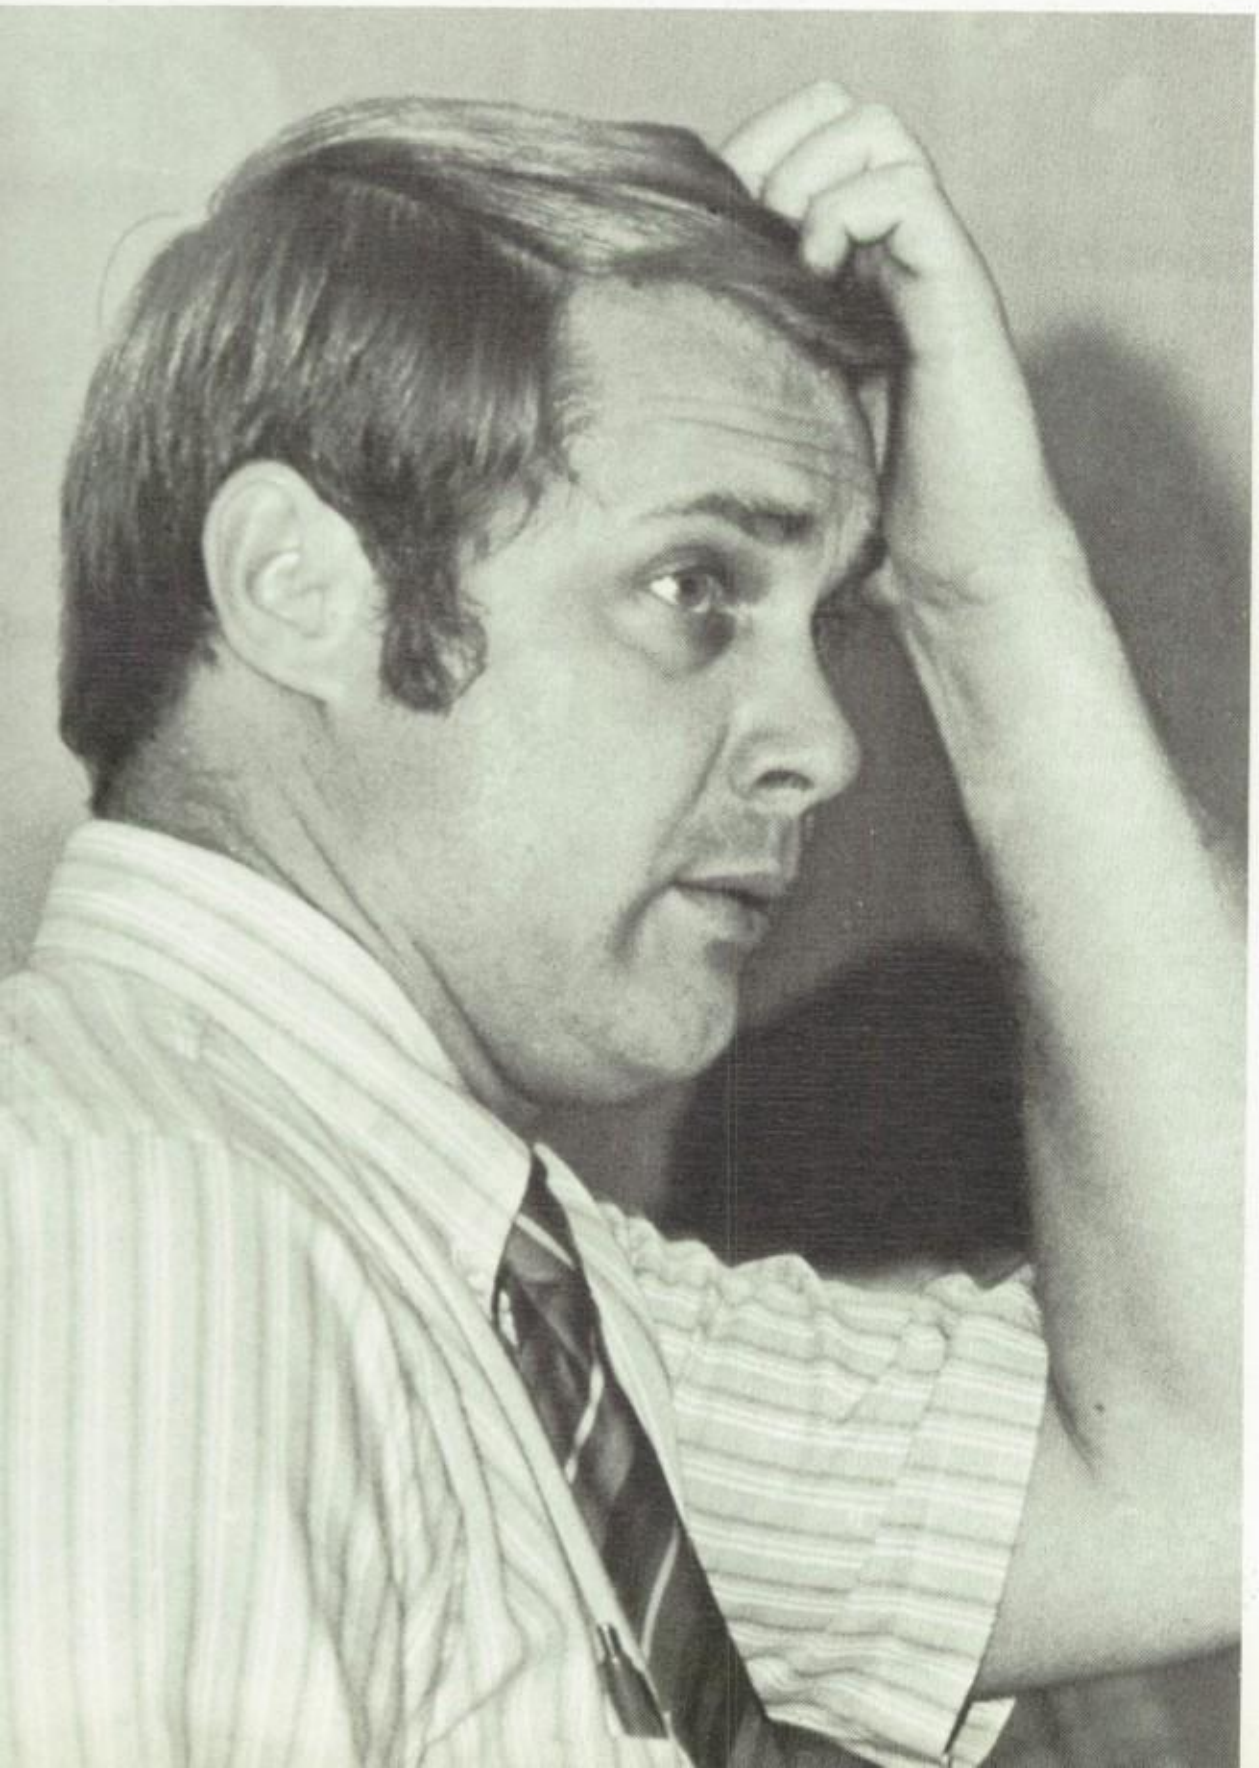
The crowd awaits the presentation of the court.



Charlie "the Beak" Kolin, fearless leader of the infamous Korner, wonders what can happen next.

The Korner speak out in search of a referee.





DEDICATION

Mr. Crowley

Why do we dedicate yearbooks to people? These people have qualities that are desired by many, but possessed by few. Willingness to extend a helping and interested hand in the most difficult situations is one of these traits. In our day and age, it is gratifying to find someone who is interested and cares enough about those around him to extend this hand. Therefore, Mr. Crowley, the 1972 IROQUOIAN is herby dedicated to you.

Mr. Gary Crowley was born on July 5, 1939 in Hornell, New York. He served two years with the Army before being graduated from Geneseo in 1963. Mr. Crowley has been active in the YMCA organization. Before coming to Iroquois in September of 1963, he worked as a life guard at Stony Brook Park.

Known as "Cool-Eye" to student sports buffs, Mr. Crowley sparked the Senior High faculty basketball team against the likes of the KB Yo-Yos and the Buffalo Pros (Bills) this past season.

Mr. Crowley currently resides with his wife, Carolyn, and their two children in East Aurora.

Who can you think of that will meet you more than halfway in solving any problem? Try Mr. Crowley. He is interested and he does care about YOU!

OUTSTANDING BOY, GIRL

Kathy Lewinski, John Wilckens Selected Senior Standouts

Kathy Lewinski, voted outstanding girl by senior class, . . . vice-president, orchestra (violinist) . . . Treasurer, chorus . . . portrayed medium Madame Arcati in "Blithe Spirit" and landlady Mrs. Kaller in "Share bath" . . . choreographer for "110 degrees in the Shade" . . . Honor Roll, National Honor Society . . .

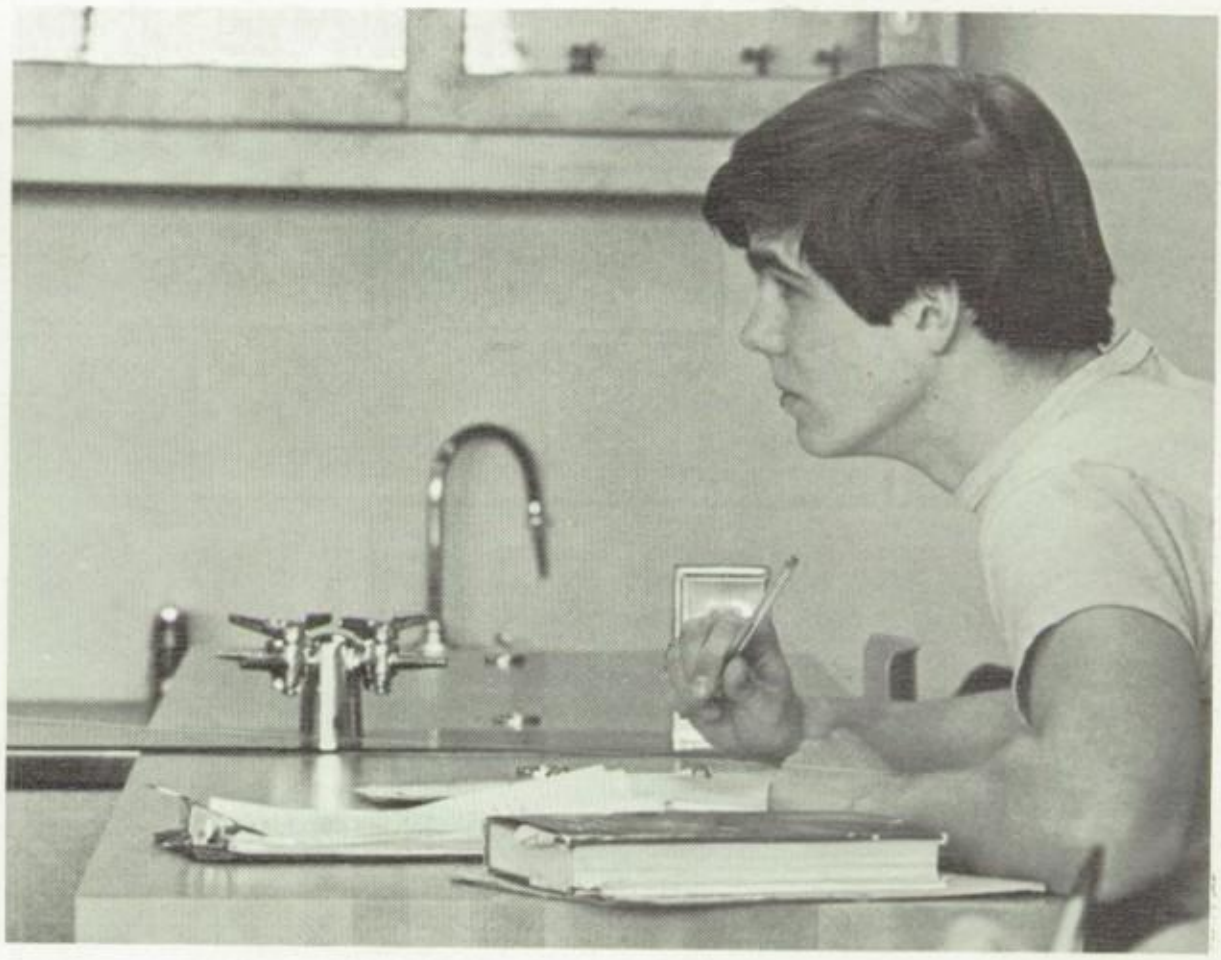
John Wilckens, named by seniors as outstanding boy . . . president, Model United Nations team . . . varsity football quarterback . . . varsity basketball guard . . . varsity baseball Most Valuable Player (pitcher) . . . Honor Roll, National Honor Society . . .

A sense of humor and a gay heart made "Lew" a natural actor on the stage.

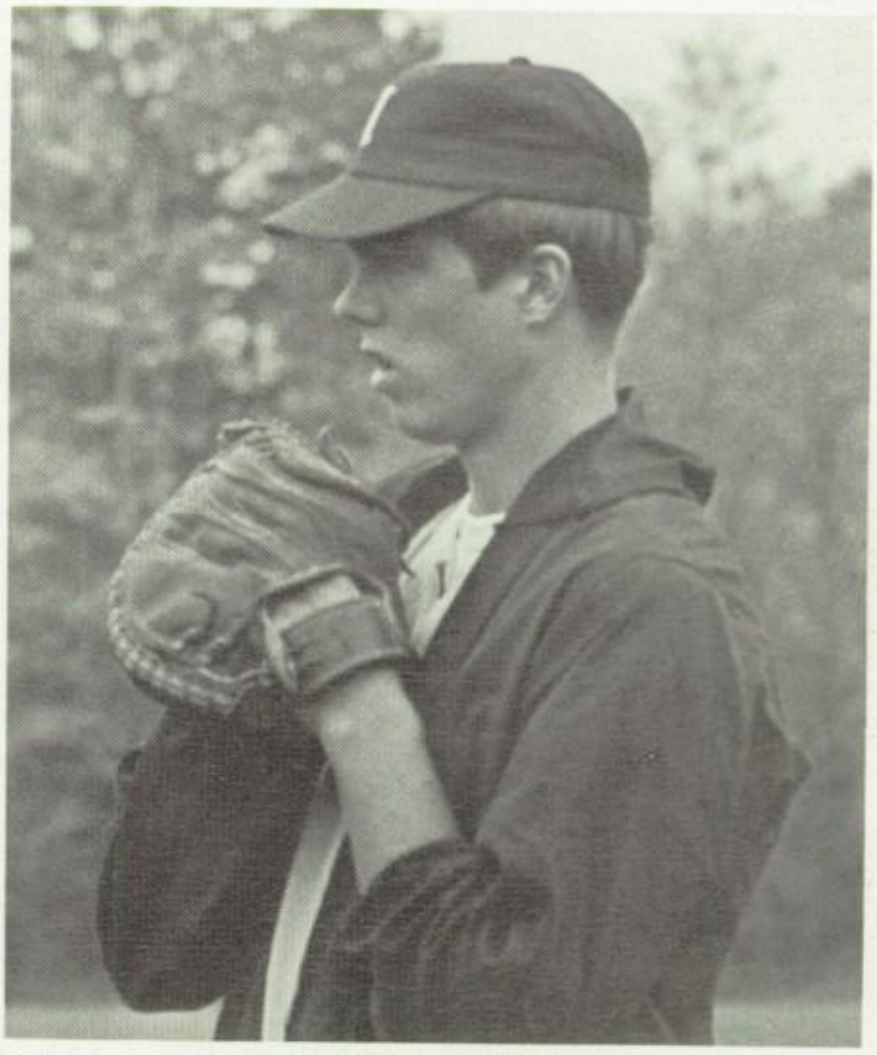
Quiet otherwise, "Wilk" exhibited a fierce spirit of competition on the court.

As illustrated, a willingness to listen was one of Kathy's outstanding traits.

In the classroom, John's concentration and diligent work paid off in an appointment to Annapolis.



On the field, a helping hand, a shout of encouragement typified Wilcken's support of his team.



Shakespeare's spirit invades ICS in Lewinski's theatrics.

IN MEMORIAM

Diana Lynn Ogilvie

Diana Ogilvie, a member of the class of '72, passed into a better world on November 11, 1971.

Her friends thought of her as a concerned and thoughtful individual, ready and willing to listen. One once said, "Just talking to her made you forget your problems, large or small."

Shy to some, but never cold, she had the courage to defend what she felt was right and a keen sense of humor "to brighten up even the darkest night."

We shall never forget her, her smile, her laugh, her presence among us. We feel like a friend of hers when she said, "It's great to keep a memory alive."

Seashells . . .

Eternal collectors are we,
snagging winging things and preserving them in the grey pouches of our minds.
Maybe to stay there forever, perhaps to be taken out now and then and fondled,
or to be lost
among the cerebral clutter.

. . . And Coins

Eternal collectors are we,
piecing together the cosmic jigsaw called memory;
we find pieces that don't fit:
simultaneously
good and bad, ugly and beautiful.
We can't assign them niches, intertwined as they are like hues of a rainbow.
Our labels fall away.
Events are people.
Emotion is motion.
And all are recorded
by our minds
far more efficiently and completely than by photographs phonographs
or autographs.
Photos and ink can fade.
Time can distort recordings with scratches and static.
But memories become a part of us.
They cannot be taken away.
